

Red Barn Report for the 2018 Washington Island Music Festival

The Music Festival continued the practice of holding three Inside the Notes talks at the Red Barn. At these informal sessions attendees gain insights into the works being performed and are invited to ask questions. Artistic director and violinist Samantha George presented the sessions on August 1st and 3rd while educator and oboist Meaghan Heinrich presented on August 9th. These sessions were once again well attended (43, 73, 47 people) and are especially popular with many of the Festival's most loyal supporters. At the second session a group photo was taken of those in attendance showing off their Music Festival T-Shirts. Judie Yamamoto hosted each of the sessions while Dan Hansen and Steve Tobey took care of the Red Barn set-up. Mary McKay organized the volunteers to provide treats and Liz Pratt arranged for volunteer help with the merchandise sales.
